Huey a Lamenting 'Second Jeremiah' Declares Robinson

And Long Chuckles Over a Good "Crack" From the Administration

ONLY SLIM CHANCE

Prospects for Third Party Bolt Don't Worry Democratic Chiefs

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—Huey Long stirred up much talk of third-party possibilities Monday, but with almost everyone convinced he had overshot the mark with a prediction that next year would see one led by President Roosevelt, himself.

His implied threat that he or some other "Share-the-Wealth" leader would succeed in winning the Democratic nomination left party leaders unperturbed. It was regarded as a foregone conclusion that the administration would have a two-thirds majority of the delegates safely lined up when the convention meets.

Long and the Rev. Charles E. Coughlin, radio priest, are felt to understand each other, even if they do not have a definite agreement as to 1936. Milo Reno, of the recent "farm holiday" movement has incited them and Governor Olson of Minnesota to meet at an early date.

The Kingfish issued his latest blast against the administration Monday, stirring up and down the president's room adjacent to the senate chamber. He was asked about Sunday night's third party reference.

"We may not have to form a third party," he said. Roosevelt may be leading a third party. He's already started a couple of third parties. He began to organize one in 1932 when he thought he might not get the Democratic nomination, and he organized one in 1933 when he ran this fellow McKee against LaGuardia.

"This ain't a Democratic party running the government now. It's a St. Vitus dance party designed by a blue hazzard, and a dead one at that." His assertion that Mr. Roosevelt asked a member of the Senate to be his running mate in a third-party campaign, if he failed to get the nomination, went unconfirmed.

Run-In With Robinson
The Kingfish, meanwhile, had another of his almost daily run-ins with Senator Robinson of Arkansas, Democratic leader. Long predicted no good would be accomplished by the $4,880,000,000 work relief bill, and reiterated his assertion that congress had "abdicated."

"You have been listening to the lamentations of a second Jeremiah," Robinson told the senate. "There is nothing we can propose that will meet the senator's approval."

Long left the chamber soon afterward, chuckling to himself and repeating: "Second Jeremiah. That's good!"

Singing at Zion

A community singing will be held Sunday afternoon, April 7, at Zion church on the Ozan-Bingen road. The announcement was made Tuesday by B. C. Webb of that community. The public is invited.

Power of Upton Sinclair Being Tested in Los Angeles

ARKANSANS TO POLLS

Predict Bloodshed in Municipal Ballot at Corpus Christi, Texas

By the Associated Press
"Off-year" city and state elections in half a dozen states Tuesday took on national importance as party chiefs eyed them as barometers of 1936. Chicago Democrats and Wisconsin Progressives went to the polls to determine whether they had gained or lost strength, and in Los Angeles the municipal primary promised an indication of the power of the Epic party fashioned by Upton Sinclair.

Numerous city elections are being held in Arkansas. In Corpus Christi, Texas, city and county officials armed themselves in preparation for the municipal election there.

The mayor, sheriff and district attorney telegraphed Adjutant General Nesbitt predicting bloodshed if the Texas Rangers were not recalled after a fight in front of the police station.

Purkins Is Named as Circuit Judge

Warren Man, Native of Hope, Succeeds Late Judge Patrick Henry

LITTLE ROCK.—DuVal L. Purkins of Warren was appointed judge of the Tenth Judicial Circuit Monday by Governor Futrell to succeed the late Judge Patrick Henry of Monticello, who died Friday.

Mr. Purkins was one of the leaders in the movement to induce Governor Futrell, then chancellor in the Twelfth district, to enter the race for governor in 1932, and served as the governor's private secretary nearly a year.

He represented Bradley county in the house in 1925 and 1927 and then served one four-year term as senator from the Bradley and Union county district.

He has resided in Little Rock for the past two years and has practiced law here since he resigned as secretary to the governor. He was appointed a year ago as attorney for the liquidating affairs of the American Exchange Trust company.

DuVal L. Purkins is a native of Hope, and was reared and educated here.

748 Children Are Married in India

Mass Ceremony Held for Babes in Arms, After Ancient Custom

BOMBAY, India.—(AP)—Their children eyes blankly bewildered and their bare feet fretfully chafing the grass, 748 infant couples were married Sunday in a meadow near the small village of Kathiwar. It was the largest mass child marriage ceremony held in India in many years.

Some of the brides and bridegrooms were infants in arms, whose parents had arranged their future lives for them in accordance with Indian customs centuries old.

Many of the babies too small to walk slept in the arms of their elders, while the latter said their "I do's" for them. Others gurgled happily at the booming of gun salutes which were a part of the elaborate ceremony.

Relief Money in State Depends on Rum, Race Taxes

Delay Confronts National Relief Bill as Dole Funds Run Low

$4,000,000 ON HAND

House and Senate Enter Tenth Week in Dispute Over Relief Bill

LITTLE ROCK.—(AP)—Apparently all the funds that the State Welfare Commission will have for unemployed and old age relief, capital circles seemed agreed Tuesday, is the revenue from horse race taxes, and the tax of 40 cents a gallon on liquor.

Action Delayed.

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—As dole funds again ran near the exhaustion point, another indefinite delay confronted the administration's $4,880,000,000 relief bill Monday night after the house had obeyed President Roosevelt's wishes and returned it to conference.

Balking at the house 249 to 110 vote to send the measure again to conference, senate conferees were called by Chairman Glass, Democrat, Virginia, to meet Tuesday to decide whether they will serve as ascend conference and what position they will take on the administration-opposed provision requiring one-third of the $300,000,000 more for loans and grants to states to be spent for direct labor.

Glass, who voted against the bill, resented a remark by Senator Robinson, Democratic leader, that the measure was opposed by four of the five senate conferees managers and therefore he had been committed to "its enemies."

Relief Funds Near Exhaustion

As the house and senate fought into the tenth week on relief, emergency relief officials said that only $4,000,000 remained on hand for direct relief, and that the FWA which has been lending funds for this purpose for more than two months had only $9,000,000 more that could be turned over without congressional action. Harry L. Hopkins, FERA chief, notified budget officials that $167,000,000 would be needed for April—the same total advanced for March.

Those who had protested the direct labor clause to the president, vacationing on the yacht Nourmahal in Southern waters, said in a letter to Glass, which was read to the senate, that this provision would be a "premium on reckless expenditure of money." Ickes contended also it would interfere with many useful projects such as school houses on which more than two-thirds of the cost would go directly to labor.

Glass, in a letter to Ickes, said he was always glad to oblige Ickes, "but in this particular instance I think you are clearly wrong and the conference report clearly right." He added that all the Senate conferees were opposed to another conference.

Broadway Group Invites Tourists

Meeting Called Here Thursday Night for Motorcade April 9

Terrell Cornelius and Gus Bernier, directors of the Broadway of America Highway association, announced Tuesday that a public meeting would be held at 7:30 p. m. Thursday at the Capital Hotel.

The purpose of the meeting is to obtain as many representatives as possible to join the Broadway motorcade to the National convention at Nashville, Tenn., April 12 and 13.

The East-West caravan, starting at San Diego, Calif., will arrive in Hope at 3 p. m. April 9. The motorcade will depart 15 minutes later.

Efforts will be made to send at least a dozen Hope citizens to the Nashville convention.

Mr. Bernier pointed out that eight years ago nearly 2,000 Broadway of America boosters, on the first motorcade to the Memphis convention, spent the night in Arkansas mud.

"Today, Arkansas has the longest stretch of good road between New York and San Diego. In Nashville the closing of the last gap and tell the world of the joy and pleasure of driving from the Atlantic to the Pacific on pavement," Mr. Bernier concluded.

Mr. Cornelius said: "The Broadway has received much favorable publicity in the past year. There have been many newspaper items and several nationally known magazines have had articles extolling its many good features."

"It is extremely important that we have a good representation at the convention from Hope. We hope that citizens here will turn out for the meeting Thursday night and assist in obtaining delegates."

Real Baruch, Able, Likeable

'Mystery Man' Makes Reply to Long and Coughlin Attack

Wilson's War Industries Board Chairman Startles Capital by Candor of His Remarks

WASHINGTON.—(NEA)—The simple straightforward, cards-on-the-table testimony of Bernard Manners Baruch before the Senate Munitions Committee has done much to dispel the fog that has gathered about him during the past 15 years.

And just in time, too. For a very real, likeable and able man was on the verge of being swallowed up in a legend. Did the stock market take a sudden drop? There were always many a whisper "Baruch." Did any change of policy take place under any president? You could hear the rumors "Baruch." Baruch here, Baruch there, a Baruch in every political woodpile.

The Long-Coughlin-Johnson debates have kicked up still more dust around him, magnifying the figure behind the dust-cloud into a modern Machiavelli. Yet the main outlines of the figure behind the dust-cloud are clear.

Father Had Notable Medical Career
Bernard Manners Baruch is a Jew, 65 years old, silver-haired, pleasant-spoken though aristocratic in manner, and a descendent from the Baruch who was aide to the prophet Jeremiah.

Simon Baruch came to this country from East Prussia in time to study medicine and serve with the Confederate army as a field surgeon. He later made solid contributions to medicine, notably in hydrotherapy.

But he did not make money. The four children, of whom Bernard was the second, went to New York City public schools. Bernard then attended the College of the City of New York, of which he is now a trustee, and to which he has always remained grateful for a public opportunity to get an education.

He started in as an office boy at $3 a week. He made friends. He studied. He speculated a little on his own. At 25 he was a junior partner in a brokerage firm. He married an Irish girl, Annie Griffin.

Devoted Aide of Woodrow Wilson
In 1899 Baruch bought the Stock Exchange seat which he owned until 1917. He made a lot of money, more than ten millions.

Then in 1912 he met Woodrow Wilson. Immediately he was drawn to Wilson with an admiration which is today almost a veneration of Wilson's memory. Wilson turned to Baruch as a "brain-truster," called him to Washington in 1916 as an adviser of the Council of National Defense.

Baruch was virtually chief purchasing agent for the allies. His recent Senate testimony has told in detail how, before accepting the job, he sold practically all his stocks, at a huge loss, and put the proceeds in Liberty Bonds. Dividends from a few stocks he could not sell were given to charity.

On appointment as chairman of the War Industries Board March 5, 1919, Baruch was virtual industrial dictator in a much more absolute sense than his protégé, General Johnson, was to be later.

Record for War Work Magnificent
The reporters who watched Baruch in action during the war agree that he did a magnificent job in what was then an untried field. He spent his own money freely, several times paying from his own capacious pockets, too, came money to send home thousands of girl employees of the WIB.

Governor Vetoes Bill; $81,000 to Stay in Treasury

Futrell Contends Assessors' Claim Is Not Legal One

NEW UTILITY SET-UP

Power to Fix Rates of Utilities Is Given New Organization

LITTLE ROCK.—(AP)—Governor Futrell Tuesday signed Senator Johnson's bill to create a State Department of Public Utilities in Succession to the Fact Finding Tribunal, and one to give the Arkansas Game and Fish Commission discretionary power to fix local fish and game regulations.

The governor vetoed a bill which sought to give county assessors $81,000 in back salaries for 1933 and 1934 which the previous legislature had failed to appropriate.

The governor said the assessors' claim was not a legal one.

18 Bills Remain Unsigned
The public utilities act gives the newly created department sweeping powers to make investigations and fix the rates of utilities.

So far as is known, three of the old tribunal members, P. A. Lasley, Frank L. Eaton, and Dean W. N. Gladson of the University of Arkansas will continue to serve as public utility commissioners.

Eighteen other bills remained on the governor's desk Tuesday, on which he must act by midnight Wednesday or they will become acts.

Driver Licenses on Sale April 15

50-Cent Fee Covers Entire Family—Supports State Police

LITTLE ROCK.—Job hunters swamped Supt. A. G. Albright of the newly created State Rangers during his first day in his office at the state-house Monday, and the entire day was devoted to applicants.

With two borrowed secretaries, the superintendent started wading through a enormous pile of letters from would-be rangers. He estimated there were more than 500 of them, with more coming in all the time.

Dozens of applicants called upon the superintendent personally in his office back of the house chamber. He took all names and promised to mail formal application blanks as soon as they are ready.

Robert H. LaFollette, assistant superintendent, was delayed in Siloam Springs by illness in his family, he reported to Mr. Albright.

Application forms for driver's license, levied to maintain the state Police Department, will be mailed to field agents of the State Revenue Department, who will begin issuing licenses Tuesday, it was announced by State Revenue Commissioner Earl R. Wiseman.

In a letter of instructions to field agents, Commissioner Wiseman requested them to begin campaign immediately in an effort to license all owner drivers by April 15. After that date unlicensed drivers will be liable to a fine of from $5 to $30.

The license fee is 50 cents per calendar year for each car owner, but any member of the same family over 16 years old may use the same license.

Services for Ouachita College Student Held From Prescott Church

Funeral services for James Queen, 19, Ouachita college student who died of what was believed to be an acute heart attack Monday afternoon, were held at 4 p. m. Tuesday from First Baptist church at Prescott.

Dr. H. L. Winburn, pastor of the Arkadelphia First Baptist church, the Rev. J. A. Overton, also of Arkadelphia, and J. R. Grant, president of Ouachita college, conducted the services.

Young Queen is the son of the Rev. J. F. Queen, pastor Prescott First Baptist church. The youth died during an initiation of upperclassmen of college students at the Ouachita river. Queen was pulled into the river. He swam to the bank where he collapsed. Resuscitating methods were employed, but to no avail. He was rushed to a hospital, but pronounced dead on arrival.

They replace Dr. Don Smith and C. F. Routhen, both retiring after nearly 12 years of service.

Mr. Wilson succeeds Dr. Don Smith as president of the board. J. R. Henry was named secretary, succeeding Theo P. Witt.

Annual election of the Hope school faculty was deferred Monday night, only routine business and the naming of new officers being completed.

Sounds Mighty Like an April Fool Story

S. JOHNS, Quebec.—(AP)—Farmers here shook their heads and cocked an eye at the calendar Monday when they heard a story from Lyndon, Vt., that a bolt of lightning streaked into the barn of Gerald Smith, deafened two horses and killed the first, third, fifth, seventh, ninth, 11th, 13th and 15th cows in the line, leaving the even numbers standing placidly waiting for breakfast. Smith swore it was true.

Lack of Vitamins May Cause Kidney Trouble

Development of stones in the kidney is a condition that has existed since medicine has any record. For some time it has been realized that kidney stones are more common among people living in certain districts. On various occasions this has been alleged to be due to the soil of the country, the amount of lime in the water, and the nature of the climate. Today it is generally believed that these factors are comparatively unimportant.

Most recent studies seem to show that the soil is not a significant factor—one reason being that the incidence of stones is steadily diminishing in the very area in which formerly it was frequent.

The tendency today is toward the view that improvement in living conditions in these areas as largely responsible for diminishing the incidence of stone formation.

Another interesting fact that has developed from the study of this disease is the observation that the appearance of stone in the kidney is exceedingly rare in districts where dairy farming is extensive, and that stones are more frequent where cereals form the staple food of the population.

In association with this point of view, recent indications place responsibility for the formations of stone in the kidney largely on absence of certain necessary vitamins from the diet.

In certain parts of Asia kidney stone is observed only as a disease of childhood. It is known that women in India live on a diet deficient in vitamins, so that their children do not secure an adequate supply of vitamins in the milk.

It has also been observed that stone in the kidney appears quite often after a person has been kept at rest in bed for a long time, as is the case after fractures of large bones or in severe diseases involving the bones or tissues. This is believed to be due to the fact that, when the patient is kept on his back, the kidneys are not well drained and a deposit of crystalline material from the urine forms the nucleus of the stone.

There seems to be no doubt also that various abnormalities of the kidneys may be associated with stone formation. Any obstruction of the flow of fluid to the kidney leads to depositing of the material and to deposit of crystalline material.

A great deal of experimental evidence of vitamin A brings about breaking down of the surface lining or membranes of many organs and tissues, including those of the urinary passages.

Thus our present knowledge of kidney stone leads to the belief that a deficiency of vitamins, particularly of vitamin A, is an important factor and that infections and abnormalities in the urinary tract may be associated factors.

YOUR CHILDREN

By Olive Roberts Barton

Spanking Arouses Furore

As was to be expected that ultimatum of Mother Reilly's (Mrs. John F. of New York) that children should be spanned, has started something.

Teams are lining up, some parents under the leadership of Captain Reilly, others under the pennant of Mrs. Clara S. Littledale, editor of "Parents' Magazine" who asserts that "spankings are unforgivably rude."

It is not the first time this question has come out into the open to be fought over with word grenades, but this time there may be more national fire-works.

In the end parents will do as they always have done, deciding for themselves whether Johnny should be smacked for eating the jam, or kissed because he was so cute about it.

Their Requirements

Mother Reilly is correct, when she says "some" youngsters cannot be handled any other way but through fear of consequences. For a fact there are children who seem determined to respect no other persuasion. Mrs. Littledale is right when she says "that persistent defiance and ugliness of spirit in a child is bound to have underlying causes, and it is tremendously important to find out what these are and deal with them. I believe in segregation," she adds, "as punishment. It works like a charm."

From years of observation and experience I myself have learned this. Most of those whom I term the most successful mothers have never lifted a finger in anger. And many I consider the greatest failures with their families have been emotional extremists, relieving their instability (and exasperation over their lack of control) by seizing the switch.

On the other hand I have seen a family here and there ruined by mammy and pambly methods when a spanking was sorely needed. Again I have seen nicely spanked families emerge into maturity none the worse and possibly all the better for having paid occasional penalties.

Really Is Secondary

The whole truth is that corporal punishment must be regarded as is any other punishment. It is not the paramount question in child rearing at all. It is incidental and secondary to the real knowledge of child handling, child nature, family conditions and family relationships.

Intelligent parents begin their regulating by early ingenuities in their children certain decent qualities, instead of permitting bad ones to get ahead, later to be switched out.

There are sensitive, easily-tormented little folk who can be ruined for good and all by one humiliating whipping. There are hard-headed kids, rough and tough and contrary, who don't care either one way or another. There are children who benefit by being reminded they just can't be that way—"shocked" one might say into thinking about their mean conduct, spanked back to the fold. It all depends upon circumstances and on the child.

A BOOK A DAY

By BRUCE CATTION

It's Very Long—But It's Very Good. Too—Thomas Wolfe's Novel Repays the Effort of Reading It.

The lot of the average reader will be more pleasant if novelists ever discover that a short novel—other things being equal—is better than a long one.

This remark is provoked by a reading of Thomas Wolfe's new novel, "Of Time and the River."

Here is a book whose length is almost overwhelming. It runs to approximately 1000 pages, and each page contains a lot of words. All things considered, it is a magnificent book—one of the best American novels of our generation, perhaps—but it seems to me that it would be much better if Mr. Wolfe had contrived to cut it in half.

Still, we must be thankful for what we get. Uneven as the book is, it contains a great quantity of splendid prose, it voices a robust Americanism (in the best sense of the word), and it presents some scenes and characters that are quite unforgettable.

It tells about a young southerner

CHAPTER XVII

THE officer nodded to Norman Happ and said, "All right, you can get out."

Happ said, "This is my father's house."

The officer turned to Caise, "You too," he said.

"But," Caise protested, "I—"

The officer scowled, strode to the center of the room and said, "Listen, both of you guys, this is no place for you to pull your heroes. Get started, and give us a chance to get this thing cleaned up."

Norman Happ stepped past Millicent toward Caise. "I've got something to say to you. Bob," he said.

The officer jerked his head toward Millicent. "Come over here," he said.

"I want to talk with you."

She followed him to the window. Young Happ and Robert Caise stood deliberately by the doorway, talking in low undertones. The officer glanced at them, frowned, shrugged his shoulders, turned to Millicent and said, "What's your name?"

"Millicent."

"Millicent what?"

"Graves."

"How long you been here?"

"Just a day or two. I haven't even got settled yet."

"You're working for Happ?"

"Yes."

She took a deep breath, then faced him and said, "Really, I'm very much upset. All of these things can't make a great deal of difference. Mr. Happ knows all about me. Won't you please get your information from him?"

"Well, why don't you tell it?"

"Because I can't see that it's any of your business, and there are certain reasons why I don't care to go into all of those details about my private affairs."

"Oh, all right," the officer said. "What time did you go to bed last night?"

"Really," she told him, "I don't know. I was very tired, but I had some things to do after I entered my room. I sat down in the chair and fell sound asleep. I woke up later—I don't know how much later I was cold and cramped."

NORMAN HAPP, standing by the door, turned and came striding over toward them, "Miss Graves," he said.

She turned to face him. Millicent said, "I just wanted to tell you, Millicent," he said, using her first name with what seemed to Millicent to be a tender note in his voice. "That this man encountered Bob Caise in the corridor. He asked Bob Caise to bring him to his father's secretary. That's the reason Bob brought the officer here."

The officer frowned, and stared at young Happ. "What the devil has that got to do with it?"

"I simply wanted her to know," Norman Happ said, "why it happened that Caise seemed to have brought you to her."

"He brought me here because I told him I wanted to be brought here."

"Exactly," Happ said.

"Look here," the officer told him, "you two get out of here, I'm doing this questioning, and I'm thoroughly capable of doing it."

Happ bowed, moved toward the door, turned and smiled at Millicent. Then he and Caise left the room, closing the door behind them.

The officer stared in frowning concentration at the doorway for a moment, said, "That was a funny way for him to act. He acted almost as though he was giving you some message."

"Oh, did you think so?" Millicent asked innocently.

"Yes," he said. "I thought so."

"But you heard just what he told me. I didn't see anything strange about that."

"Is he," asked the officer, "in love with you?"

"Why, the idea," she gasped. "I've only been here for a day! I've talked with him only once or twice."

"Who'd be beating up on young Caise?"

"Had someone?"

"The side of his face looked as though he'd been slapped, and he'd either stopped a punch on his jaw, or else I don't know a socked jaw when I see one."

"Certainly," Millicent said. "I didn't sock his jaw, as you call it."

HE let his eyes soften slightly with humor, and said, "How about his face? Did you slap his face?"

"Yes," Millicent said defiantly. "I slapped his face, if you want to know."

"Why?"

"It was a personal matter."

"How personal?"

"Very personal."

He stared at her for a minute and then said, "You don't know what time you went to bed?"

"No."

"Did you hear anything unusual afterwards?"

"Oh, no."

"This is your room?"

"Yes."

"You couldn't hear a small caliber gun fired back in the chauffeur's room, anyway," the officer said.

"A small caliber gun?" she echoed questioningly, trying to avoid the appearance of sparring with him, yet seeking to draw him out and save herself as much questioning as possible.

"Yes, a small caliber gun. Someone shot Harry Felding with a small caliber gun."

'Mystery Man'

when they were no longer needed in Washington.

To the Versailles peace conference went Baruch, as economic adviser to Wilson. He was unpopular because he foretold that the reparations plans would flat, that the war debts were unpayable.

With the Harding administration, Baruch faded out of the political picture. He turned to the study of the farm problem with Alexander Legge and Hugh Johnson, and his researches were gratefully used by many big farm organizations.

President Coolidge he liked and admired. Hoover he had known as food administrator during the war. Both president consulted him.

The Hoover debt moratorium and the National Credit Corporation (forerunner of the RFC) are supposed to be Baruch's brain children.

Gives Liberal Help to Roosevelt

Baruch was not a "before Chicago" Roosevelt man, but when FDR was nominated Baruch gave $53,000 and frequent counsel to the campaign. But he was not even offered a cabinet post, though his money and brains had been a Democratic party mainstay for 12 years. He was, and still is, frequently consulted by President Roosevelt. But his clearest policy, the gold standard, was abandoned in his face, to his chagrin and sorrow. To Bernard Baruch dollar devaluation was robbery.

Baruch has a genius for friendship, and keeps closely in touch with former associates.

A Thought For the Day

Sorrow comes and sorrow goes,
Life is flecked with shine and shower;
Now the tear of grieving flows,
Now we smile in happy hours;
Death awaits us everyone,
Teller, dreamer, preacher, writer,
Let us, then, ere life be done,
Make the world a little brighter.

Burdens that our neighbors bear,
Easter let us try to make them;
Chains, perhaps, our neighbors wear,
Let us do our best to break them;
From the straitened hand and mind
Let us loose the binding fetter;
Let us, as the Lord designed,
Make the world a little better.

—Selected.
